

Carbon Monoxide Poisoning

Every year in the United States over 200 people die and another 10,000 are sent to hospitals for carbon monoxide poisoning.

What is Carbon Monoxide?

Carbon Monoxide (CO) is a colorless, odorless and tasteless poisonous gas. It is produced by the incomplete combustion of solid, liquid and gaseous fuels. Appliances fueled with natural gas, liquefied petroleum (LP gas), oil, kerosene, coal or wood produce CO. Running cars, or other gas powered engines also produce CO.

How do you prevent CO poisoning?

Make sure appliances are installed according to manufacturer's instructions using local building codes or installed by a professional. Also, have the heating system (including chimneys and vents) inspected and serviced annually by professionals. Install a CO detector in the hallway near every separate sleeping area of the home and on every floor. Never use portable gas or charcoal inside a home to heat or cook. Never leave a car running in a garage, even with the garage door open.

What should you do if you are experiencing symptoms of CO poisoning?

Get to fresh air immediately and call 911.

What should you do if your CO detector is alarming?

Never ignore an alarming CO detector. If the detector sounds: Operate the reset button. Call 911. Immediately move to fresh air. Carbon Monoxide is deadly, it is known as the silent killer. Since carbon monoxide is odorless and colorless you will not even know that this poisonous gas is present in your home until it is too late. This year give yourself a present, buy a Carbon Monoxide Detector.
